OF

Paintings

AND OTHER WORKS OF ART.

First follow Nature, and your judgment frame
By her just standard, which is still the same.
Unerring Nature—still divinely bright
One clear, unchanged, and universal light;
Life, force, and beauty, must to all impart—
At once the source, and end, and test of Art.

The Gallery is open every day, Sundays excepted, at 497 BROADWAY.

ADMISSION FREE.

THE
AMERICAN ART-UNION,

IN THE CITY OF NEW-YORK,

WAS INCORPORATED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK FOR THE

Promotion of the Fine Arts
IN THE UNITED STATES.

It is managed by gentlemen who are chosen annually by the members, and receive no compensation. To accomplish

A TRULY NATIONAL OBJECT,

uniting great public good with private gratification at small individual expense, in a manner best suited to the situation and institutions of our country, and the wants, habits and tastes of our people, the Committee have adopted the following:

P L A N :

Every subscriber of five dollars is a member of the Art-Union for the year, and is entitled to all its privileges.

The money thus obtained, (after paying necessary expenses,) is applied,
FIRST.—To the production of a large and costly Original Engraving from an American painting, of which the plate and copyright belong to the Institution, and are used solely for its benefit.

Of this Engraving every member receives a copy for every five dollars paid by him.

Members entitled to duplicates are at liberty to select from the engravings of previous years.

Whenever the funds justify it, an extra engraving or Work of Art is also furnished to every member.

Every member also receives a full Annual Report of the proceedings, &c., of the Institution.

SECOND.—To the purchase of Paintings and Sculpture by native or resident artists.

These paintings and sculptures are publicly exhibited at the Gallery of the Art-Union till the annual meeting in December, when they are publicly distributed by lot among the members, each member having one share for every five dollars paid by him.

Each member is thus certain of receiving in return the value of the five dollars paid, and may, also, receive a painting or other Work of Art of great value.

THIRD.—The Institution keeps an office and free Picture Gallery, always open, well attended, and hung with fine paintings, at 497 Broadway where the members in New-York receive their engravings, paintings, &c., and where the business of the Institution is transacted.

The business of the Institution out of the City of New-York is transacted by HONORARY SECRETARIES, who receive and remit subscriptions and deliver to the members in their vicinity, the Reports, Engravings and Works of Art, after exhibiting them a few days—subject to which right they will be distributed.

The Engravings, &c., to which all the members are entitled, are forwarded to the Secretaries, at the expense and risk of the Institution. The Paintings, &c., which are distributed by lot, are forwarded to the Secretaries, at the expense and risk of those who have been so fortunate as to draw them. The Secretaries will deliver them, on being paid the actual cost of boxing and transportation.

Honorary Secretaries will be appointed by the Committee of Management on application to the Corresponding Secretary, from persons suitably recommended.

The Institution also publishes a semi-monthly Bulletin, containing the plan, officers, purchases, &c. &c., which is furnished to the Secretaries for distribution to the members and others.

The following table shows the progress of the Institution :

Years.	No. of Members.	Receipts.	Engravings.	No. of Paintings etc., dist. by lot.
1839	814	$4,200 78	No Engraving.	36
1840	686	3,927 47	General Marion inviting a British officer to dinner.	14
1841	937	5,205 16	The Artist's Dream.	7
1842	1120	5,883 70	Caius Marius on the ruins of Carthage.	35
1843	1452	7,129 00	Farmers Noonng.	51
1844	2080	10,080 90	Sparkng and Escape of Capt. Wharton.	92
1845	3233	16,165 00	Capture of Major Andre.	115
1846	4457	22,293 00	Sir Walter Raleigh parting with his Wife.	146
1847	9666	48,733 91	Jolly Flatboatmen and Sibyl.	572

This year, each member will be entitled to a copy of a large engraving, QUEEN MARY SIGNING THE DEATH WARRANT OF LADY JANE GREY, now being engraved in line by Burt, after Huntington; and, also, the celebrated tale of Washington Irving, with six large original OUTLINE ILLUSTRATIONS, now being engraved by Darley. There will also be distributed, by lot,

RIP VAN WINKLE,

200 BRONZE MEDALS OF WASHINGTON ALLSTON;
also,

250 BRONZE MEDALS OF GILBERT STUART, and it is believed, about

THREE HUNDRED PAINTINGS,

richly framed, including some of the master pieces of American Art.

The annual meeting and distribution will take place this year on the 15th day of December.

Subscriptions and payments may be made to either of the Honorary Secretaries, or to the Superintendent, at the Art-Union Rooms, by letter or otherwise, or to the Collector for the city of New-York.

Remittances and all letters should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary. Drafts, payable in New-York, to the order of the Treasurer, should be sent when practicable.

Persons desiring the back Engravings, may obtain them by multiplying their subscriptions; they will be entitled to one Engraving, and one share in the distribution, for every Five Dollars paid.

Catalogue,

Paintings, and other Works of Art, purchased by the Art-Union, to be distributed by lot among the members at the annual meeting in December next.

The paintings, &c., are placed in the order in which they are purchased, without regard to cost or merit.

No. 1. The Mission of the Jews to Ferdinand and Isabella, E. Lentze.

"The negotiation was suddenly interrupted by the inquisitor general, Torquemada, who burst into the audience chamber, and drawing forth a crucifix, held it up, exclaiming, 'Judas Iscariot sold his master for thirty pieces of silver. Your Highnesses would sell him anew for thirty thousand; here he is, take him, and barter him away.' So saying, the frantic priest threw the crucifix on the table and left the apartment.—Prescott's Ferdinand and Isabella, Vol. II., p. 137.

"Preparations for a retreat commenced immediately. It was executed in the face of many obstacles. The horses were few and weak, and the men were obliged to assist in dragging the cannon over a broken road. Col. Washington set a worthy example to his officers, by lading his horse with public stores, going on foot, and paying the soldiers a reward for carrying his baggage. In two days they all got back to Fort Necessity."

 100. Voyage of Life—A Series of Four Allegorical

First Picture—(CHILDHOOD.)

A stream is seen issuing from a deep cavern, in the side of a craggy and precipitous mountain, whose summit is hidden in clouds. From out the cave glides a boat whose golden prow and sides are sculptured into figures of the Hours: steered by an Angelic Form, and laden with buds and flowers, it bears a laughing infant, the Voyager whose varied course the artist has attempted to delineate. On either hand the banks of the stream are clothed in luxuriant herbage and flowers. The rising sun bathes the mountains and flowery banks in rosy light.

The dark cavern is emblematic of our earthly origin, and the Mysterious Past. The Boat, composed of Figures of the Hours, images the thought, that we are borne on the Stream of Life. The Boat identifies the subject in hours in each picture. The rosy dawn light of the morning, the luxuriant flowers and plants, are emblems of the joyousness of early life. The close banks and the limited scope of the scene, indicate the narrow experience of Childhood, and the nature of its pleasures and desires. The Egyptian Lotus in the foreground of the picture is symbolical of Human Life. Joyousness and wonder are the characteristic emotions of Childhood.

Second Picture—(YOUTH.)

The stream now pursues its course through a landscape of wider scope and more diversified beauty. Trees of rich growth overshadow its banks, and verdant hills form the base of lofty mountains. The infant of the former scene is become a Youth on the verge of Manhood. He is now alone in the Boat, and takes the helm himself; and in attitude of confidence and eager expectation, gazes on a cloudy pile of Architecture, an air-built Castle, that rises dome above dome in the far off blue sky. The Guardian Spirit stands upon the bank of the stream, and with serious yet benignant countenance seems to be bidding the impetuous voyager 'God speed.' The beautiful stream flows directly toward the aerial palace, for a distance; but at length makes a sudden turn, and is seen in glimpses beneath the trees, until it at last descends with rapid current into a rocky ravine, where the voyager will be found in the next picture. Over the remote hills, which seem to intercept the stream, and turn it from its hitherto direct course, a path is dimly seen, tending directly toward that cloudy Fabric, which is the object and desire of the voyager.

The scenery of this picture—its clear stream, its lofty trees, its towering mountains, its unbounded distance, and transparent atmosphere—figure forth the romantic beauty of youthful imaginings, when the mind magnifies the Mean and Common into the Magnificent, before experience teaches what is the real. The gorgeous cloud-built palace, whose most glorious domes seem yet but half revealed to the eye, growing more and more lofty as we gaze, is emblematic of the day-dreams of youth, its aspirations after glory and fame; and the dimly seen path would intimate that Youth, in his impetuous career, is forgetful that he is embarked on the Stream of life, and that its current sweeps along with resistless force, and increases in swiftness as it descends toward the great Ocean of Eternity.

Third Picture—(MANHOOD.)

Storm and cloud enshroud a rugged and dreary landscape. Bare impending precipices rise in the lurid light. The swollen stream rushes furiously down a dark ravine, whirling and foaming in its wild career and speeding toward the ocean, which is dimly seen through the mist and falling rain. The boat is there, plunging amid the turbulent waters. The voyager is now a man of middle age: the helm of the boat is gone, and he looks imploringly toward heaven, as if heaven's aid alone could save him from the perils that surround him. The Guardian Spirit calmly sits in the clouds, watching with an air of solicitude the affrighted voyager. Demon forms are hovering in the air.

Trouble is characteristic of the period of Manhood. In Childhood there is no cankering care; in Youth no despairing thought. It is only when experience has taught us the realities of the world, that we lift from our eyes the golden veil of early life; that we feel deep and abiding sorrow; and in the picture, the gloomy, eclipse-like tone, the conflicting elements, the trees riven by tempest, are the allegory; and the Ocean, dimly seen figures the end of life, to which the voyager is now approaching. The demon forms are Suicide, Intemperance, and Murder, which are the temptations that beset men in their direst trouble. The upward and imploring look of the voyager, shows his dependence on a Superior Power, and that faith saves him from the destruction that seems inevitable.

Portentous clouds are brooding over a vast and midnight Ocean. A few barren rocks are seen through the gloom—the last shores of the world. These form the mouth of the river, and the boat, shattered by storms, its figures of the hours broken and drooping, is seen gliding over the deep waters. Directed by the Guardian Spirit, who thus far has accompanied him unseen, the voyager, now an old man, looks upward to an opening in the clouds, from whence a glorious light bursts forth, and angels are seen descending the cloudy steps, as if to welcome him to the Haven of Immortal Life.

The stream of life has now reached the Ocean, to which all life is tending. The world to Old Age is destitute of interest. There is no longer any green thing upon it. The broken and drooping figures of the boat show that time is nearly ended. The chains of corporeal existence are falling away; and already the mind has glimpses of Immortal Life. The angelic Being of whose presence until now the voyager has been unconscious, is revealed to him; and with a countenance beaming with joy, shows to his wondering gaze scenes such as mortal man has never yet seen.

101. Luther at Nuremburg, refusing to recant, . E. H. May.

Serralonga.—"When all forsake you, where will you take refuge?"

Luther, (smiling and looking upwards with the eye of faith,) "Under Heaven!"

For an instant Serralonga was struck dumb by this sublime and unexpected reply.

Gen. Washington appointed a board of fourteen general officers, with the assistance of the Judge-Advocate, Gen. John Lawrence, to examine into and report Major Andre's case. Major Andre, disdaining to shield himself under any subterfuge, and anxious to place his character in the fairest point of view, voluntarily declared more than was required, and did not palliate anything relating to himself, while he concealed whatever might criminate others. The candor and dignity of his deportment, while it struck his enemies with admiration, inspired an affecting tenderness for his situation throughout the American army.—Smith's Narrative of Andre.

Dec.. 10, 1848.

[From the Knickerbocker Magazine of November, 1848.]

THE AMERICAN ART-UNION.

ART-UNIONS were invented in Germany. It was there, about twenty-five years ago, that the power of associated effort, the importance of which had already been recognized in commercial enterprises, was first applied to the encouragement of Art. In 1823, a society was established in Munich, which, according to Count RACZYNSKI, was the earliest that had for its principal object the promotion of Modern Art, and the encouragement of rising genius, by the purchase of pictures. The Berlin association was founded in 1825. It owed its organization, in a great degree, to the talents and zeal of the celebrated WM. HUMBELDT. It was he who drew its constitution and was its first president. Associated with him were the sculptors RAUCH and TIECK, the architect SCHINKEL, the painters WACH and SCHADOW, and other distinguished men. Societies of a similar character soon sprung up in every part of Germany, and before the close of the year 1839, there were twenty-nine in full operation in that country, exhibiting an aggregate of twenty-seven thousand two hundred and twenty-one subscribers, and annual receipts amounting to nearly one hundred thousand dollars.

The London Art-Union was established in 1837. The annual receipts of this institution have increased from a few hundred pounds the first year to more than seventeen thousand pounds in the year 1846. Flourishing institutions of the like nature have been organized in Edinburgh, Dublin, Manchester, Birmingham, and other cities of the United Kingdom.

In our own country, the American Art-Union, then called the Apollo Association, was founded in 1838, and incorporated by the Legislature of New-York in 1840, and Art-Unions have, within a few years, been also established in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Boston.

The plan of all these societies in Europe and America, is essentially the same. Each subscriber pays some small amount annually. This forms a fund, which, after defraying necessary expenses, is appropriated to the production of engravings, and the purchase of works of Art. The engravings are given to all the subscribers, and the other works of Art are distributed among them by lot. In the London association, money prizes are allotted instead of paintings, the holders being required to expend the money in the purchase of works from certain specified exhibitions. This plan has been adopted by the Philadelphia association. In nearly all the others, however, the works distributed are selected by the managing committees, and an attempt is now being made by the Board of Trade, which has the supervision of the London Society to have the same method adopted there.

The American Art-Union is the only one in this country, which, from the extent of its operations, and the amount of its resources, can be called a national institution. Its history is a striking proof of the peculiar adaptation of its plan to the character and circumstances of our people. The rapidity with which it has grown in public favor, is altogether unprecedented. At the first anniversary meeting in December, 1839, the number of subscribers for that year was stated to be eight hundred and fourteen, and the amount received from them, four thousand one hundred and forty-five dollars. In 1841, the number of subscribers was nine hundred and thirty-seven, and but seven works of art were distributed. Six years afterward, in 1847, the subscribers had increased to nine thousand six hundred and sixty-six: the receipts to forty-eight thousand seven hundred and thirty-three dollars and ninety-one cents, while nearly three hundred paintings were distributed, beside hundreds of medals in silver and bronze. Its prosperity during the present year is still more remarkable. The Bulletin of October tenth, states, that for the few weeks previous to that date, the subscriptions were four times as many as they were the last year during the corresponding period. A list of from twelve to fifteen thousand is confidently anticipated; but the committee have determined, that whenever so much money is received as can be judiciously invested in paintings, the books will be peremptorily closed, although subscriptions received afterward will be entered in their order at the head of the list for 1849.

It is not surprising that there should be so much eagerness displayed to participate in the next distribution. The programme is uncommonly attractive. The engraving promises to be one of much merit. It is from a striking picture by Huntington, representing "Queen Mary signing the Death Warrant of Lady Jane Grey." In addition to this, each subscriber will have a copy of Irving's tale of Rip Van Winkle, beautifully printed and illustrated by six large outline etchings by Darley. We confidently predict that the publication of this series will mark an era in American Art. Several of them have been completed, and we say, without hesitation, that nothing has been issued by any foreign Art-Union which excels them in the expression of character and feeling. They tell the story as significantly as Irving has done it in words. In delicacy of execution they are fully equal to Retzsch's celebrated outlines, while they are superior to these in fidelity to Nature and in entire freedom from academical stiffness.

The paintings already purchased are thought by many to be a better collection than any previously distributed; and even to form the best exhibition of works by American artists ever opened to the public. This opinion seems far from being extravagant, when we consider them in detail.

Here are the superb series of the "Voyage of Life," by Cole, four pictures finished by him in the full maturity of his powers, and for which he received six thousand dollars from the late Mr. Ward. This great allegorical production is too well known to require more particular mention in this place. Here are two landscapes by Durand, one of which, "Dover Plains," should rank with the best of his works. Those who have observed the wonderful truth to nature with which the long range of distant mountains, covered with forests, and illuminated by the broad sunlight, has been painted in this picture, will fully acquiesce in this assertion. There is also here a glorious historical scene by Leutze, "The Mission of the Jews to Ferdinand and Isabella." Rarely has this accomplished artist depicted the energy of passion with so much effect as in the Torquemada of this piece. "The Strolling Musician," by Edmonds, shows that quick appreciation of character, and those pure colors and silvery tones for which that artist is distinguished. Beside the "Queen Mary," from which the engraving is being made, the collection contains two charming landscapes by Huntington. It embraces also an excellent work by Church, the pupil of Cole, and one of the most promising of the younger landscape painters. This is called "The River of the Water of Life," and will well repay the closest study. There is given in it the effect of the sunset illuminating a lofty headland, while the rest of the scene is in shadow. In this picture, let the visitor observe the truth with which a partial rippling of the stream is represented, and the great accuracy of touch in the foliage. We might enumerate also works by Doughty, Chapman, Grey, Kensett, Cropsey, Hinckley, May, Wenzler, Audubon, Glass, Rossiter, Gignoux, Duggan, Oddie, Peele, White, and many others, most of them interesting specimens, and generally exhibiting a marked improvement over former productions.

In addition to this long list of pictures, and many others which will be purchased before the close of the year, should be mentioned the medals which are not the least attractive of the advantages offered by the Union. The subject for the medal this year, is the distinguished portrait painter, Gilbert Stuart. Of this the die has already been executed by Wright, and highly successful it is, both as a likeness and work of art. Two hundred and fifty copies of it will be distributed, and also two hundred of the Allston medal, which was published in 1847, and which has been greatly admired.

As to the influence of this Association upon the condition and prospects of Art in this country, we think that it has been beyond a question most beneficial. It has certainly brought the subject before the public more distinctly, extensively and constantly, than it has ever been presented before, and created an interest in regard to it in multitudes, who otherwise would have remained unmoved and uninformed. More has been effected in this way, perhaps, than in elevating the standard of public taste, although something has been done in the latter direction. The Art-Union has brought forward several artists of great promise, who would certainly have languished in obscurity without its timely patronage. Since its establishment, it has distributed nearly eight hundred paintings. It has published six engravings in line, three in mezzotint, and one in outline, from which, more than thirty-six thousand impressions have been disseminated among its subscribers, from Maine to Texas. It has established agencies in all the principal towns, and many of the villages of all the states, and also in Canada, Mexico and the West Indies. It publishes a regular Bulletin of its proceedings twice each month, which is communicated to the subscribers through the Honorary Secretaries.

So far as the extent of territory embraced in its operations is concerned, all the foreign associations are insignificant in comparison with this. It receives, exhibits and distributes the works of artists residing in the most remote parts of the United States and of Europe. Pictures by more than one hundred different persons, from St. Louis, New-Orleans, Cincinnati, Mobile, Rome, Dusseldorf, Boston, New-York, and many other widely-separated places, were in 1847 hung side by side in the gallery. There is something grand in this feature of the Institution. There is a largeness and liberality about it which is worthy of the genius of the nation. Every poor struggling artist, no matter how narrow his circumstances—how remote his residence, can send his work hither with a certainty of its being examined by unprejudiced eyes, and receiving a fair judgment. Here it will be compared with other works, and subjected to that ordeal which true genius courts rather than dreads.

It must be remembered, also, in estimating the influence of the Art-Union, that its Gallery is not only the receptacle of its own purchases, but is frequently adorned by paintings and statues which have been ordered by private citizens: and which, under other circumstances, would never be seen by the public. In the course of the present year many beautiful works have thus been exhibited—the productions of foreign as well as of native artists, and owned by the residents not only of New-York, but of other cities. The superb "Court of Queen Bess." by Leutze; Woodville's "Cavalier's Return;" Church's charming "Tribute to the Memory of Cole;" and "The Quarrelling Couple," by Hubner, have been admired here by thousands, who otherwise would never have seen them. In connection with this subject, it may be observed, that under the London and Philadelphia system of distributing money prizes instead of paintings, all these advantages resulting from a free gallery must be relinquished. And here, by way of parenthesis, let us add, that under such a system, there can be no well-established scale of prices for Works of Art. A Committee of Management certainly are not infallible; but it must be obvious to all, that their long practice in making purchases of this sort, and their opportunities for comparing one man's productions with another's, and with his own previous works, would enable them to form a juster estimate of the value of any particular object submitted to them than could be attained by the inexperienced subscriber.

With us in New-York the accompanying privilege of the free gallery should settle the question as to the comparative merits of the two plans beyond all dispute. The Gallery is no longer a superfluity; it has become a necessity. It is a part of the public property as much as the fountains, the parks, or the City-Hall. The retired merchant from the Fifth Avenue, the scholar from the University, the poor workman, the news-boy, the beau and the belle, the clerk with his bundle—all frequent the Art-Union. Its hall shows the progress of the hours as well as Trinity clock. First come the noisy boys and girls, on their way to school; then the staid merchants drop in as they go down to their counting-houses; then appear the strangers from the country, who set off early after breakfast to see the lions; about noon the gentlemen in moustaches and yellow kids lounge about the seats, yawning in the faces of the fashionable ladies who alight from their carriages here on their road to Stewart's; in the afternoon comes the returning throng from the offices and counting-houses, while in the evening the working-men, whose shoulders through the day have been free from the restraints of broad-cloth and buckram, don their uneasy Sunday-coats and come hither by hundreds, escorting their wives and children, and all their female relations. Now of all these motley crowds, is it not certain, beyond a doubt, that many go forth from this gallery with minds elevated by what they have seen, with manners and feelings refined, with new checks fastened upon coarse and unruly passions? Is it not certain that tastes are begotten here which afterward shed the charm of quiet and content over many a household? Nay, is it not certain, that sparks of genius have been kindled here in poor neglected bosoms, which shall dazzle us with their glorious light at some future day?

Not much has been written about this Institution in magazines and newspapers. It has attracted much less attention in the literary world than its importance demands. It has even been slandered in some quarters, and several falsehoods concerning it have been spoken and written. The selection of pictures, of course, is frequently attacked. One overhears constantly in the gallery the most annihilating criticisms. The outside, non-subscribing gentlemen, who have the entertainment provided for them gratuitously, are generally more ferocious in their ridicule than any others. One thinks that their happiness for life will be destroyed by the exhibition they have condescended to visit, so terrible are the oaths and epithets with which they assault it. Here, for instance, is a pair of moustaches and lemon-colored kids fresh from Europe. Every opinion which comes from him is oracular. He has walked through the Louvre, the Pitti Palace, and the Varican; he has ordered copies of the Magdalen of Carlo Dolce and the Madonna della Seggiola; he has bought shell-cameos in the Piazza di Spagna, and sulphur casts in the Toledo; he has twisted his neck in the Rospigliosi, and bumped his head in the Golden House of Nero; he is consequently a Winkleman and Raphael Mengs united in the eyes of admiring friends. Of course nothing here pleases Kids-and-Moustaches. Not that he sees the pictures particularly; he pretends to be looking at them, to be sure, but all the while is thinking of himself, and trying to remember the big words of his Italian ciceroni, so that he may astonish the by-standers with the learning and pungency of his criticism. For our part, we prefer to such people the poor working-woman who knows not oil-paint from water-colors, but who weeps when she looks upon "The Mother's Prayer," unconscious of any defect in form and color, and seeing only its truth of character and expression.

Verily, the longer one considers the subject, the more numerous seem the requisites for critical competency in matters of Art. For those of us who do not possess these qualifications, the safest and happiest plan is to encourage a habit of wide-liking; to hunt for all the beauties and excellencies in any work which may be submitted to us, and allow ourselves, if possible, to be pleased with them. Acting upon this principle, we confess to have taken a great deal of comfort in the Art-Union Gallery. We believe it gives us a fair view of the present state of American Art; that if some inferior works have crept into the collection, nothing very good has been offered which has been allowed to remain unpurchased. We think that the artists are decidedly improving, both in elevation of aim and in technical skill. We are sure that the Committee of Management are sincerely striving to raise the standard of the public taste; that they are bestowing much time and labor upon this object; and we call upon all patriotic citizens to assist them in it by friendly words and prompt subscriptions.

EULOGY ON THOMAS COLE.

DELIVERED BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT. MAY 4TH. 1848.

"In 1840 Cole completed another series of large paintings, called the Voyage of Life, of simpler and less elaborate design than the Course of Empire, but more purely imaginative. The conception of the series is a perfect poem. The child, under the care of its guardian angel, in a boat heaped with buds and flowers, floating down a stream which issues from the shadowy cavern of the past, and flows between banks bright with flowers and the beams of the rising sun; the youth, with hope in his gesture and aspect, taking command of the helm, while his winged guardian watches him anxiously from the shore; the mature man, hurried onward by the perilous rapids and eddies of the river; the aged navigator, who has reached, in his frail and now idle bark, the mouth of the stream, and is just entering the great ocean which lies before him in mysterious shadow, set before us the different stages of human life under images of which every beholder admits the beauty and deep significance. The second of this series, with the rich luxuriance of its foreground, its pleasant declivities in the distance, and its gorgeous but shadowy structures in the piled clouds, is one of the most popular of Cole's compositions.

* * * * *

"He is now gone forth for ever; gone forth to gladden his friends no more with his return; the home which was brightened by his presence is desolate; the sorrow for his absence is perpetual.

"We might imagine, therefore, a sound of lament for him whom we have lost in the voices of the streams and in the sighs of the wind among the groves, and an aspect of sorrow in earth's solitary places; we might dream that the conscious valleys miss his accustomed visits, and that the autumnal glories of the woods are paler because of his departure. But the sorrow of this occasion is too grave for such fancies. Let me say, however, that we feel that much is taken away from the charm of nature when such a man departs. To us who remain, the region of the Catskills, where he wandered and studied and sketched, and wrought his sketches into such glorious creations, is saddened by a certain desolate feeling when we behold it or think of it. The mind that we knew was abroad in those scenes of grandeur and beauty, and which gave him a higher interest in our eyes, has passed from the earth, and we see that something of power and greatness is withdrawn from the sublime mountain tops and the broad forests and the rushing waterfalls.

“Withdrawn, I have said—not extinguished, translated to a state of larger light, and nobler beauty, and higher employments of the intellect. It is when I contemplate the death of such a man as Cole, under such circumstances as attended his, that I feel most certain of the ‘spirit’s immortality. In his case the painful problem of old age was not presented, in which the mind sometimes seems to expire before the body, and often to wither with the same decline. He left us in the mid-strength of his intellect, and his great soul, unharmed and unweakened by the disease which brought low his frame, amidst the bitter anguish of the loved ones who stood around him, when the hour of its divorce from the material organs had come. calmly retired behind the veil which hides from us the world of disembodied spirits.”

Extract from a Pamphlet, by T. W. WHITLEY, published at Cincinnati, 1848.

“Of the series of Cole, we feel diffident in speaking. We do not believe, however, that the most fastidious of his erudite friends would regard the maxim, ‘De Mortuis,’ &c., as applicable to his works; and, as far as the painter is concerned, (and we knew him well,) we feel persuaded that he would be most indulgent at the freedom of our speech concerning his beautiful mental creations. When Cole ascends to the heavens, he brings down its light; and it is worthy of notice, that in this series of pictures, Cole was only in his glory when he was in idea where he is now in reality. The genius and power of endurance which these pictures show forth are concentrated in the second of the series. It is a magnificent juncture of Heaven and Earth—an arcadia in which angels might linger—an inspired suggestion of what is possible to those who seek to make the world a paradise. Cole was fortunate in his friendships; he walked with men who held communion with their Maker; and hence, his lofty aims—his great achievements. Cole was not a landscape painter after the manner of men, although as diligent a student as ever cast eye heavenward, or abroad upon the earth. Like Antæus, he touched the earth only to ascend, as the great apostle illustrated ‘the heavenly by the earthly.’”

Co Artists.

Any Work of Art offered to the Art-Union for sale, must be presented in writing, with the title of the picture, the name and residence of the artist, the lowest price asked, and the address of some person in the city of New-York, to whom it may be returned. The freight, and other expenses, must be borne by the artist.

Paintings offered for sale, will be hung in the Gallery, and inserted in the Catalogue, at the discretion of the Committee, unless the artist shall otherwise direct.

No picture will be exhibited in the Gallery without a suitable frame.

No member of the Committee of Management, or other officer of the Art-Union, can receive any commission or compensation for the sale of any Work of Art purchased by the Institution, nor can the Corresponding or Recording Secretary, Treasurer or Superintendent, act as agent for any artist or picture-dealer.

The Art-Union desires to keep a register of all the Artists in the United States, and they therefore request Artists to send to the Corresponding Secretary by mail or otherwise, THEIR ADDRESS AT LENGTH

ADVERTISEMENTS.

DEL VECCHIO,

Carver, Gilder, and Frame Maker, has taken the Ware-Rooms No. 495 Broadway, (one door south of the Art-Union Building,) for the Manufacture of Frames, and the Sale of Paintings, Engravings, and other Works of Art.

WILLIAMS & STEVENS,

Have recently opened, at 353 Broadway, a few doors above their former place of business, the most extensive establishment in the department of Looking-Glasses, Picture-Frames, Fine Engravings, Paintings, &c., to be found in the United States.

The inducements presented to purchasers are—

An Assortment not to be met with elsewhere ;
Articles of uniformly Good Quality ;

Prices as low as at any other establishment.

The liberal and constantly increasing patronage with which they have been favored in their first enterprise, has encouraged the subscribers to embark in the new ; and they respectfully solicit a continuance of that support to which the public shall consider them entitled.

WILLIAMS & STEVENS.
